

tadei.pargab@gmail.com

Digital competence involves the confident and critical use of information society technology (IST) and thus basic skills in information and communication technology (ICT).

cultural contexts.

Communication in the mother tongue is the ability to express and interpret concepts, thoughts, feelings, facts and opinions in both oral and written form (listening, speaking, reading and writing) and to interact linguistically in an appropriate and creative way in a full range of societal and cultural contexts.

Mathematical competence is the ability to develop and apply mathematical thinking in order to solve a range of problems in everyday situations, with the emphasis being placed on process, activity and knowledge.

Basic competences in science and technology refer to the mastery, use and application of knowledge and methodologies that explain the natural world. These involve an understanding of the changes caused by human activity and the responsibility of each individual as a citizen.

Civic competence, and particularly knowledge of social and political concepts and structures equips individuals to engage in active and democratic participation.

Social competence refers to personal, interpersonal and intercultural competence and all forms of behaviour that equips individuals to participate in an effective and constructive way in social and working life. It is linked to personal and social well-being and understanding of codes of conduct and customs in the different environments.

Learning to learn is the ability to pursue and organise one's own learning, either individually or in groups, in accordance with one's own needs, awareness of methods and opportunities. It also includes ability to deal with learning obstacles, evaluates the learning outcomes and taking responsibility for one's learning.

Cultural awareness and expression involves appreciation of the importance of the creative expression of ideas, experiences and emotions in a range of media (music, performing arts, literature and the visual arts).

Sense of initiative and entrepreneurship is the ability to turn ideas into action. It involves creativity, innovation and risk-taking, as well as the ability to plan and manage projects in order to achieve objectives. The individual is aware of the context of his/her work and is able to seize opportunities that arise. It is the foundation for acquiring more specific competences and ethical values needed by those to social or commercial activity.

Communication in foreign languages is the ability to express yourself and understand a foreign language, according to your needs. It involves curiosity about languages and intercultural communication, a positive attitude towards diversity, cultural differences and intercultural understanding.