Blended learning gets real substance	The more cross-border cooperation, the better	EU programmes ALWAYS changes young people lives for best
Peer-led youth groups, especially using the Service Learning model	Predictability of funding opportunities	Digital work seems to have been a good model of continuing previous activities and tools.
There is an increased awareness about the need for recognition of youth work	asd	Uniting selected young people coming from five European countries to foster active citizenship.
There is more projects built on structured processes, long-term partnerships, approach testing	In diversity (and awarness), in cooperation, in holistic growth, sustibility of actions, activism etc	We have established a Collection of Letters from Europe, where our partners wrote about their overcoming of the covidcrisis all over Europe. It was our way to stay in touch with them and develop projects later on.
Young people learning teachers (central/new role young people/youth workers can play)	During several Erasmus + projects implementation we manage to connect young people from 3 continents and to create cooperation among them. They got basic skills to combat and tackle different social topics in societies.	Youngsters are more becoming more aware of their role in the society.
Intercultural dialogue and acceptance	Europe Goes Local	Discovering ourself by exchanging programs.
Cross-sectoral cooperation	opportunities for cross-border, multi-agency and country partnerships that would not have been possible otherwise	regional cooperations, active engagement
Cooperation and active participation	a number of volunteers who have started small business	There is more collaboration between organizations from E+ programme countries and WB countries, which opens the possibility of exchanging practices and is also transmitting democratic principles to WB countries.
Start diving into a using digital tools in youth work. Our activities further for sure will be mix of youth work and digital youth work.	direct connection of youths from different countries of EU and not only	Changes made through youth participation.
Connecting youth sector with other sectors	Youth entrepreneurship and employment initiatives as a key of local development.	Working more with children and adolescents than before

Ideas for using EU youth programs more effectively

Longterm cooperations	Connect it more to local reality	hold regular online meetings and presentations, having an online platform connecting organisations
Strategical partnerships and long term cooperation.	The programs need to be accessible for more people. But also youth have to apply more. More applications more chances	Make them more visible thru all means possible: social media, papers, radios, tv programmes..
More funding for local activities.	cross-sector collaboration	life long learning
Emergency preparedness Self sufficient communities Healthy life styles	As a platform, to offer youngsters a way to participate in their personal / professional development and participate in decision making processes. To gain experience overseas	Long term projects, funding over 3 years
Connect to local needs and reality	Empowering youth workers (support, education, recognition)	more possibilities for organisations from partner countries to apply reaching youth from rural area and/or " with fewer opportunities " make human rights based education as transversal methodology, local activities with global aims	We need to make more space and time for planning the projects then we do now. We also need funding for that because of the the distance	common projects but local based with long impact
Make cooperation between neighbouring regions possible..	Synergy effects in strategic development on local level	Building sharing platforms to exchanges good practices/ideas/together projecting
To lower down the administration and to dedicate the propositions for enabling long term cooperation between partner organizations from different countries. To enable sustainable funding for organizations to cooperate for longer period.	'Speed-dating' between partner and program countries, to identify good fits between organisations that can set up partnerships for volunteer exchange.	focus on follow-up projects
Maybe in direction of blended activities with focus on recognizing youth work and developing cross sectoral cooperation. Also, working with youth from rural area and on their connection with other.	It would be great if the applications for KA2 projects involving WB countries could be submitted by a partner from a programme country, or to have two deadlines per year, instead of one.	Exchange of knowledge and practices, youth mobility possibilites good communication between organisations and NAs	Widen the scope the target group. Focus more on disadvantaged communities so that they benefit from EU youth programs. Not only people who are linked to higher education programs, and who are more likely to be already convinced by these concepts.
