By the end of the training, participants will have enhanced their personal and professional understanding of intercultural learning, develop practical tools for fostering inclusion and diversity in youth work, and gain valuable skills for empowering young people to engage in intercultural dialogue and build more cohesive communities.

What will the training look like?

This training course provides an opportunity to explore intercultural learning in youth work settings, equipping youth workers with the skills and knowledge to create inclusive, reflective, and impactful learning environments for young people. Through non-formal education methods and experiential learning, the training will introduce participants to key concepts such as stereotypes, prejudices, and discrimination, while introducing them to theories and models of intercultural learning. Training will also focus on the facilitation and design of educational processes, enabling participants to understand the competencies and roles involved in supporting intercultural learning.

The training goes beyond theoretical input by involving participants in interactive exercises, group discussions, and hands-on workshops aimed at building practical skills for developing intercultural learning activities. Special attention will be given to the creation of local-level initiatives that promote inclusion, diversity, and active engagement within communities. By the end of the course, participants will have deepened their understanding of intercultural learning, developed concrete action plans, and gained tools and strategies to implement meaningful youth work activities that celebrate diversity and foster mutual understanding.

The training course is developed in line with Youth Goal 3: Inclusive Societies and contributes to:

1. Ensuring that all marginalised young people have equal access to formal and non-formal learning environments, addressing all the dimensions of inclusion.
2. Strengthening the capacities of educators to work with marginalised young people.

The training course will be based on non-formal education methods and experiential learning approaches. The program is designed to provide participants with the knowledge, skills, and tools necessary to understand intercultural learning, tackle stereotypes and discrimination, and support intercultural educational practices in youth work.

Objectives

- Objectives:
- To explore concepts of stereotypes, prejudices and discrimination; and raise knowledge of participants about intercultural learning and different models and theories of intercultural learning.
- To develop understanding and knowledge of participants about facilitation and design of intercultural learning.
- To develop skills of participants for development of comprehensive intercultural learning activities.
- To improve skills of participants for developing local-level intercultural learning based activities.

Participants are expected to attend the full duration of the TC
