CLIMATE-CONSCIOUS YOUTH WORK (2ND EDITION)

13 - 20 October, 2026
Kaunas, Lithuania

Globalcitizen.lt

Co-funded by the European Union

Why this training course?

Young people are among the most exposed populations to the accelerating climate crisis. According to European research and policy analysis, climate change is already affecting young people's daily lives, health and long-term wellbeing, contributing to increased physical risks, social inequalities and emotional strain, including eco-anxiety. The Council of Europe and the European Commission highlight that young people are currently experiencing, and will continue to bear, the brunt of worsening climate impacts, making climate action not only an environmental issue but also a matter of intergenerational justice.

Youth engagement is increasingly recognised as a decisive force in achieving Europe's green transition. Both formal (school systems, civic participation structures) and informal (community projects, youth work) pathways empower young people to contribute to environmental action. The European Green Deal support initiatives emphasise that youth bring creativity, fresh perspectives and a direct stake in long-term climate solutions, making their involvement indispensable.

The Council of Europe's groundbreaking Recommendation on Young People and Climate Action stresses that young people must be meaningfully included in climate decision-making processes. The recommendation highlights the need to protect young climate defenders, ensure access to rights, and remove structural barriers preventing youth from influencing policy.
