

CALL FOR PARTNERS

Sharing practices for preventing gender-based violence and supporting victims

Partnership building

23rd-29th November 2026 (travel days included)

Palermo, Sicily, Italy

Open to: EU member states and third countries associated with Erasmus+ programme

InformaGiovani and its IGnet network members are organising a partnership-building activity called “Sharing practices for preventing gender-based violence and supporting victims” within the frame of InformaGiovani Erasmus+ Accreditation in the field of Youth. The activity will be implemented in cooperation with the PGV Network.

CONTEXT

This activity is part of InformaGiovani and IGNet’s strategy to address and prevent gender-based violence, an issue we have been working on for several years. As part of this strategy, we have adapted the violencemeter, distributed it, and implemented its use in schools, youth centres and workshops with young people. We have also addressed topics such as building positive relationships, gender education and preventing violence in international projects involving young people.

Our association is part of Preventing Gender-Based Violence Network (PGVNet), an informal network of 16 organisations from 15 EU countries promoting dialogue and cooperation on tackling gender-based violence. The network is coordinated by Solidarités Jeunesses within the framework of the CERV Programme.

According to the Council of Europe's youth-sector guidance, organisations should:

- adopt a written GBV and safeguarding policy;
- train all staff and volunteers;
- create accessible and safe reporting channels;
- ensure gender-balanced leadership structures;
- include discussions on consent, equality and respectful relationships;
- work with local GBV specialist services;
- regularly review policies and collect data on incidents.

However, a survey conducted by the IGNet Network across eight European and non-European countries gathering the experiences of 668 youth workers, volunteers and participants on gender-based violence, revealed that many organisations in the NGO sector fall short on these points. The most common causes were poor communication between staff and volunteers - even where a policy exists - and a lack of training. The survey also found that, while many organisations hold good principles and pay some attention to the topic, they largely lack operational and systematic tools.

We believe that bringing together organisations with diverse knowledge of the topic can help share good practices, protocols and intervention methods among practitioners who work regularly with young people, useful for tackling cases of violence and abuse and for supporting victims. This would strengthen the role of the NGO sector in addressing this phenomenon across Europe and beyond.

AIMS AND OBJECTIVES

The activity aims to bring together organisations looking to expand their knowledge of gender-based violence prevention, with the goal of identifying ways and tools to address the issue with young people. At the same time, as violence and abuse are increasingly reported in projects involving young people, the activity aims to bring together organisations with experience in handling such cases, so they can share information and measures for supporting victims.

The activity is aimed at organisations interested in developing policies for safer partnerships, built on clear educational standards and specific preventive measures, as well as guidelines for preventing and managing cases of violence. Starting from how the phenomenon is perceived and addressed in each country, and an analysis of needs, participants will work together to develop policy ideas and guidelines that better prepare those working with young people to handle such situations. Participating organisations will also have the opportunity to build further cooperation for future projects addressing the prevention of gender-based violence.

The partnership-building activity will address the following objectives:

- Reflect on common policies existing or to be adopted
- Share existing tools on preventing GBV to be adapted or replicated
- Share good practices, protocols and intervention methods for tackling cases of violence and abuse and for supporting victims
- Explore the need for common advocacy
- Build up partnership for future cooperation
- Establish contact with specialist services at local level

In line with European Youth Goals 2 (gender equality) and 3 (inclusive societies), the mobility aims to empower participants by equipping them with the knowledge and tools to address the topic with young people, raise awareness of gender-based violence, promote equality and create safer, more inclusive communities.
