

Education for Human Rights in Youth Work

International Training Course on Methodology of Human Rights Education for multipliers from all over Europe

Conference number: 12410

In this spring academy a broad spectrum of methods for Human Rights Education for (international) youth work will be presented. Therefore we will first discuss the origin and aims of Human Rights and in the next step exchange ideas about how the topic can be integrated into our own practice working with young people.

This will be done through short specialist lectures and a variety of interactive methods, such as role-plays, simulation games, discussions in small groups etc. Dividing the participants into workshops with different aspects and focusses will allow an individual choice of subjects and an intensive work atmosphere in small groups.

SONNENBERG-PORTRAIT

The International House Sonnenberg is the conference centre of the Sonnenberg-Kreis e.V., an independent provider of non-school based education in Europe, which is registered as an educational charity under German law.

We organise conferences throughout the year, normally with participants from several countries. Thanks to our international network, we are an experienced partner for international projects.

We work primarily in the following areas: the securing of human rights, peace, solidarity and social responsibility.

We organise seminars and conferences with international, intercultural, socio-critical, political and ecological subjects for children, young people, school groups, adults, the third age, families.

Additionally, we offer inservice training for teachers and multipliers, interdisciplinary specialist conferences on educational subjects, programmes within the system of Educational Leave, training in competence for Europe, conferences for people with disabilities, as well as leisure visits and seminars in other countries.

We are also happy to offer our rooms and services to conference organisers with their own programmes and leisure activities. We are equally happy to provide a tailor-made programme on request.
