

CALL FOR PARTNERS!

Context and needs

The youth of today are increasingly less aware of the dangers of violence and discrimination. There are campaigns and workshops to combat prejudices, raise awareness of issues such as racism, gender violence or bullying. However, violence finds its subtle ways through which it is manifested. It often disguises as something normal or it spreads hidden in the anonymity of the new technologies. Therefore, it is necessary to make these discriminations young people are not aware of visible or those that are accepted by society.

AIM

Explore, visualize and create strategies to combat invisible racism and discrimination and to fight against microviolences in youth contexts.

Objectives

- * To share tools and methodologies for working with young people on the issues of invisible discrimination and microviolences.
- * To make research on the power relationships that lead to discrimination and violence.
- * Raising awareness of the different forms that discrimination and violence can have at social, relationship and internal level.
- * To make research on the current realities of the young people to detect forms of invisible violence or discrimination.
- * - To find and share examples of good practice to promote the good treatment.

Topics

- * Invisible discrimination and micro-violences
- * Power relationships
- * Good treatment

Target countries

- * Programme countries.

Participants

- * Youth workers and trainers
- * Youngsters
- * Teachers and involved actors in the topic

12th September
deadline
Training in June 2015

For further information contact us
manuel@cazalla-intercultural.org

To apply fill this form:

<http://goo.gl/yKqLuc>

