About Harghita County

With a total area of 6339 km², Harghita county is situated in the central part of Romania. To the west it borders with Mureș county, to the south with Brașov and Covasna counties, to the east with Bacău and Neamț counties, while to the north it neighbours Suceava County. Harghita County was created after the dissolution of the Mureș-Magyar Autonomous Region during the last administrative division of the country in 1968, and lies mostly on the territory of the former Ciuc and Odorhei regions.

Besides the beauties of nature, the sites of built heritage are also popular tourist destinations. Due to its geographic position, Harghita County can be regarded as a link between East and West – both as far as its natural features and as far as the aspects of its cultural and religious life are concerned. From an ethnographic point of view, Hungarian traditions successfully blend with Romanian and – in certain regions – with Armenian traditions. The Dârjiu fortified church is a UNESCO World Heritage site. Among the other notable monuments are the Mikó Castle in Miercurea Ciuc, the Lázár Castle in Lăzarea, the Armenian Catholic church and the Armenian dwelling houses in Gheorgheni, the 'Székely-attacked fortress' in Odorheiu Secuiesc and the Moglănești wooden church. The interiors of several churches in the Ciuc and Odorhei regions feature mural paintings of the Saint Ladislaus legend. Ruins of medieval forts can also be visited.

Harghita County is primarily a rural area. Its main source of attraction resides in the intimate relationship of its inhabitants with nature and in the always renewing, living traditions. Folk culture and traditional husbandry practices - values that have already been forgotten in West-Europe – are part of everyday life here, which can be easily noticed while travelling across the countryside. The spectacular Szekler gates decorated with ancient motives prove that folk culture is alive in the region.

Tourists are welcome to take part in organised programs where they can be initiated in the ins and outs of pottery, weaving or wood carving, are offered the possibility to bake home-made bread or to have rides on horse-drawn carts. The traditional balls organised in the villages of Harghita County offer wonderful opportunities for learning folk dances.
